WE NOMINATE

Leon Oswald Head, one of the nation's best-known business executives, who this week retired from the presidency of the gargantuan Railway Express Agency which under his direction had demonstrated to the satisfaction of a critical public that anything can—and does—go by Express. A relative newcomer to the Princeton scene, Head at age 70—after a half-century in the express field—probably knows as much as any living American about ever-changing customs and trends within these United States.

A native of Milner, Ga., and a graduate of Ouachita College, Arkadelphia, Ark., Head made his start in 1898, taking over a Wells Fargo clerkship at Dublin, Tex., following service as an infantry lieutenant in the Spanish-American War. He moved up year-by-year, and rung-by-rung—clerk, agent, general agent, superintendent, efficiency superintendent, vice president's assistant, vice president—until he was named president in 1932 of the I.C.C.-supervised agency that had been evolved from what was once seven major express companies.

His career bracketed an era of startling expansion and the express bills moving over his desk reflected the demands of a restless, energetic people. For instance, as a young expressman in the "Gulf Southwest," he was largely concerned with carloads of ice, bottled soda pop and bananas—three items not found in express cars since the development of mechanical refrigeration, local bottling plants and specialized freight service. Today the same express territory specializes in oil-well equipment, geodetic charts for off-shore drilling and hundreds of once undreamed-of articles.

The Railway Express Agency, collecting more than $400,000,000 annually in transport fees and daily toting just about anything imaginable on 10,000 trains, was facing a grim future when Head assumed the presidency in the depth of the depression. Business was shriveling and employees were being laid off by the hundreds. Head promptly covered the express system, met some 40,000 employees and convinced them that they could build business. For the next 57 months, 1932-1937, Express revenue mounted steadily.

For symbolizing the tremendous achievements of the generation that, in spite of the criticisms of those who have followed, guided this country through one of its most fateful periods; for never losing his zest for pioneering; for giving Princeton one more reason to describe itself as a "unique community," he is TOWN TOPICS' nominee for

Squeeze Plays. Whether or not it was a center of learning, Princeton was like any other village or city in the nation in that some of its unsuspecting citizens were good for variations of "the old shell game." This week, three separate rackets were being operated here: An itinerant vendor of high-quality nurses' and waitresses' uniforms was displaying samples, accepting a 90c down payment. He took a number of orders, made no deliveries at all.

An equally wayfaring photographer was coming into Princeton homes with his camera, taking pictures of mother & children, selling four "family portraits" for $3. Although this was advertised as "full cost," the developed prints arrived a few days later marked "c.o.d. $5 plus postage." Curiosity was figured to pay off, generally did.

A "visiting suit salesman" displayed samples of high-quality men's clothing, painstakingly measured a number of potential customers, asked for & got a $20 deposit. After a day or two's good work, he took equal pains to visit another, still unidentified community.

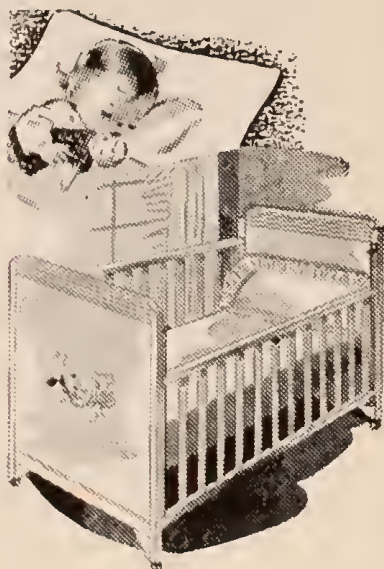

If the aura of learning that permeates the community wasn't sufficient protection, Patrolman Carl Anderson had a good suggestion. "Why not tell the people through TOWN TOPICS," he said, after reporting the incidents to us, "to patronize their local merchants?"

How Big? As the 1950 census nears, estimates are beginning to be made on Princeton's actual population. R. Kenneth Fairman, currently directing the hospital's house-to-house drive, told us this week he thought round figures might show 17,500. Foster Jemison, head of the Motor Vehicle Agency, had a measuring stick all of his own, not on the actual total but on the rate of growth. "We issued more license tags in March of this year," he said, "than we did in all of 1948."

Birthday. The Nassau Building and Loan Association, observing its 25th anniversary this Spring, has had the same president (Henry G. Duffield), the same treasurer (Harold M. Hinkson) since it was formed in March of 1924. At the end of its first year, incidentally, its shares had earned a whopping 12%. That can't be done today, of course, but the series currently open will reimburse holders at a very attractive figure, is as safe & sound as the future of Princeton itself.

Broadcast. Young musicians have been partaking in concerts aired over WPRU, the University radio station, from The Dielhenn Studios on Nassau Street . . . those heard in a recent broadcast included

It's New to Us

Cotton Skirts, Matching Headbands. What, you may ask, is so new and exciting about cotton skirts and matching headbands? There is nothing new in the articles themselves; but when you hear the price, you're bound to agree with us that they rate a high place on the buys-of-the-year list. For a mere $2.50 your daughter can have a handmade cotton print skirt (some with slight trimming and pockets) plus an elasticized headband that can be worn wide or, by folding or crushing, narrow.

Another unusual angle is the size range for that price—they are available in 7 to 14 for the girls who usually find themselves in the forgotten age when it comes to cute and inexpensive clothes. For the smallest of those, the waistbands are on elastics so that whether or not they have a waistline, the skirts will stay up.

The sets will be on sale at The Wellesley Club Bazaar which will take place at Miss Fine's School this Saturday from noon to 5. Another buy worth mentioning are the girls' basket bags with cotton print drawing tops for $1.50. There will be lots more there, but if you have a daughter or know a girl to give to, these three things should see you at the bazaar the minute it opens!

Blackberry Julep. Since our column is supposed to make some sense, we've only dared to try this delectable new beverage at present writing in two of the many ways in which it can be used. Those two tests (long with ice, short and straight), plus a thorough perusal of Clementine Paddleford's column in the Herald Tribune, have us completely convinced that it is a nectar-like drink for those who like blackberries and wine. (It might even convert those who don't.)

The julep itself is new, and so is at least one use which Miss Paddleford, after sipping it at many New York restaurants, recommends for it: as a demi-tasse replacer. (We—Continued on Page 7

Sports in Short

Foot and Boat Races. Track and crew will hold the sports spotlight this weekend before a Spring house party crowd. The Tigers' improv- ing cinder team will face Yale in the Stadium at 2, with the power- ful Elis favored to triumph in an interesting meet. Matty Geis' team is strong in the high hurdles, the middle distances (440 to one mile), hammer and shot put, but doesn't figure to upset the Blue.

Eight races in all will feature the regatta on Carnegie, with a 2,000-meter brush between the varsity and Rutgers, and the Goldthwait Cup climaxing the program. Dutch Schoch came up with the surprise of the East in retaining the Childs Cup on the Harlem last weekend, and his improving boat is expected to have little difficulty in outrow- ing the Scarlet.

The lightweight shell won at Penn last Saturday in preparation for its annual clash with the Har- vard and Yale 150-lb. boats. Chuck von Wrangell, ex-Cornell oarsman who is in his first year as a Prince- ton coach, has a strong combina- tion pulling the Race looms as a toss-up. Admission is free to a pleasant afternoon on the shores of Carnegie; first race at 3:10.

With the Nassau ball squad, it's "wait 'till next year" as far as the league championship goes but the familiar slogan may ring true for the promising Tigers. Only Kepler and Wolcott are seniors on the first-string varsity, while the fresh- men have three or four promising players including a southpaw pitcher, Harry Brightman, who of- fers considerable promise.

Wolcott's earned run average is just about a flat 1.00 for 36 innings, a mark that holds good for the two games he has worked in the league. But the Tigers are rated at only .400 after five games—too much of a hurdle to overcome as far as the title is concerned but not too great a barrier for a first-division berth. It's Army away this weekend, Cornell here Wednesday.

THE PLAYHOUSE

Adventure in Baltimore (Thurs.-Sat.), a pleasant if somewhat plodding period piece, tells of Shirley Temple's indignation when she finds that her 1905 contemporaries don't believe in women's rights. Robert Young helps hold the story together.

Flamingo Road (Sun.-Wed.) is the route the now blonde Joan Crawford travels as she goes from a job in a second-rate carnival to wife of a political boss, all the while acquiring power and riches. Zachary Scott, Sydney Greenstreet are with her in a too-familiar, somewhat lifeless melodrama.

The Fan (Thurs. - Sat.) leans heavily on flashback technique to record the life & loves of Lord Windermere in British 19th century society. Neither dialogue nor the good acting of Jeanne Crain, Madeleine Carroll and George Sanders can bail the film out of its lethargic pace.

THE GARDEN

The Set-Up (Thurs. - Sat.) portrays Robert Ryan as a boxer who would not throw his last fight. Plot, action and photography will appeal to fight fans.

Mourning Becomes Electra (Mon., Tues.) is a faithful reproduction of Eugene O'Neill's lengthy, unrelieved tragedy which deals in murder, suicide and incest. Hardly entertainment in the accepted form but of considerable theatrical value. Rosalind Russell, Raymond Massey. (Second show, 9:15).

Shoe Shine (Wed., Thurs.) an Italian drama of post-war reconstruction problems, ranks as one of the outstanding foreign films to come to these shores. Photography, acting and direction make it a distinctly unusual, worthwhile picture.

can't see why it couldn't follow coffee as a liqueur substitute, too.) To serve it as a tasty hot sip, bring the wine almost to a simmer, but not quite, or its wonderful true-blackberry, tangy flavor will be lost.

Following up on that "true blackberry"—it may interest you to know why it won out in the Home Institute "blind" tasting test. We quote Miss Paddleford: "The blackberry is rather bland fruit, except for its acidity. During the fermentation, when considerable heat is created, the delicate flavor esters (?) are partially volatilized. To give the drink back its full goodness the maker has added concentrated blackberry, juice and pulp, in a soluble form—a processing method evolved after two years of research."

Anyway, it's good. If you don't want to drink it, ask Yeoman's Liquor Store, which carries it, about the recipe for blackberry julep sauce to serve over desserts. It can be used, too, in gelatine moulds, chiffon pies, etc. $147 per bottle.

Bailey's, 14 Witherspoon, would be it. Made of an eyelid-like elasticized material which looks cool and is, it doesn't look as if it gives support, but does.

If you don't need too much in the way of support, we can't imagine anything that would be less uncomfortable and at the same time, surprisingly nice-looking. (It even has blue bows for decoration!) Sizes are small, medium, large; price, $1.98; garters, completely detachable for hot stockinged days.

THUNDERBIRD DAY CAMP FOR BOYS will open June 21 at the C. S. Cortelyou's Farm. Tel. 3595-R-1 for information.

ATTENTION, PARENTS! $10 is little to pay for an accident policy on your child. Even a minor accident can cost you ten times that in medical expenses. Call or write The Princeton Agency, 32 Nassau St.
